MICK

As usual I praise the detail of your evidence.

What I cannot understand is why, when there is a difference of opinion about details - such as actual measurements or approved plan numbers - it seems impossible to show who is correct. I mean correct to the extent that those interested would agree what it is correct.

At the moment we have facts being put forward by you and the Council putting its own version, with the latter tending to be believed.

It is this state of affairs that lets the Council state whatever it likes with out fearing a challenge that bothers them.
